Tamrat, Taddesse. "Processes of Ethnic Interaction and Integration in Ethiopian History: The Case of the Agaw." Journal of African History 29(1): 5-18. Different sections of the Agaw (Agau) seem to have constituted an important part of the population occupying the highland interior of northern Ethiopia from ancient times. Establishing the great Zagwe dynasty (to ca. 1270), they transmitted the institutions and traditions of Axum almost intact to later generations.
