

Incomprehension Workshop presented by Ann Morgan

Tuesday, 3 May, 2022 at 10:00-11:30 am CT (CHICAGO) | 4:00-5:30 pm LONDON

JOIN US for an interactive online session exploring how embracing not knowing and focusing on the things we don't understand in a text can enrich and broaden our relationship with reading, culture and ourselves. It draws on an approach to reading developed during Ann Morgan's 2012 quest to read a book from every country.

Ann Morgan, the 26th Annual Mortenson Distinguished Lecturer (2016), is a UK-based author, editor, literary explorer, TED speaker, and Royal Literary Fund fellow

Ann Morgan is an author and editor based in Folkestone, UK. In 2012, she set herself the challenge of reading a book from every country in a year, recording her quest on the blog ayearofreadingtheworld.com. In addition to widespread international media coverage, the quest led to a TED talk with more than 1.8 million views and the non-fiction book Reading the World. Nearly ten years after her original quest, Ann continues to blog, write and speak about international literature, as well as building a career as a novelist. Her debut novel, Beside Myself, has been translated into eight languages and optioned for TV. Her next novel, Crossing Over, was published as an Audible Exclusive in 2019. She is Literary Explorer in Residence of the Cheltenham Literature Festival for 2022 and 2023.

Register for FREE at:

<https://go.illinois.edu/MC-event-regn>

For more info: <https://www.library.illinois.edu/mortenson/other-events/>

